Working with Emergency Responders: What Clinicians Need to Know

Clinician Education Program

In recognition that there are many clinicians who wish to work with emergency responders (law enforcement, fire, EMS and dispatch) but who do not know where to go to obtain quality specialty training for this population, Brower Psychological, with support from ResponderStrong, is producing a series of APA-approved classes. These classes will provide an overview of responder culture and occupational exposures with the aim of building a foundation for cultural competency. Content will also address the immersion of responders in vicarious trauma, its impacts, signs/symptoms, and appropriate care. The first live version of this training will be hosted by Brower Psychological at 8554 Northfield Blvd, Denver, CO 80238 on June 13, 2019 from 0900-1700. The web-based version is anticipated in Fall 2019. Dr. Brower is uniquely qualified to develop this program as she is a career Police & Public Safety Psychologist who also serves as the President of the American Board of Professional Psychology’s Academy. Dr. Brower has been in practice in the Denver area for 19 years. She works with local, state and federal agencies.

Cost: $250
7 hours APA accredited CE’s

Overview:

* Web-based content distributed on an established learning management platform allows easy access, registration and tracking. (Live version offered in Denver June 13, 2019).
* Approximately 7 hours of video-based educational content developed in conjunction with a Board-certified Police and Public Safety Psychologist and wellness SME’s from the emergency response world.
* Content includes an overview of responder culture, occupational exposures, responder concerns, potential career impacts, stress injury formation, evidence-based trauma treatment modalities, and common manifestations of traumatic exposure in the work and home life.
* Content is APA endorsed for continuing education credits.
* Additional peer-reviewed journal articles related to responder mental health issues and evidence-based practice and other relevant reading materials will be provided through the course.
* Direction to relevant resources for clinicians and clients is provided via the ResponderStrong website (vetted treatment facilities, trauma intensive, retreats, psychoeducation opportunities, trainings, responder-specific couples’ workshops, support tools, mindfulness practices, etc.).

BARRIER; RESPONDER CULTURE AND BELIEFS

- Culture values strength. Responders do not easily ask for help.

- Responders not supposed to have mental health issues. Responders don’t want to admit if they have a “human” condition that needs to be checked. The cultural expectations delivered from higher ups: “We hired you to be a robot.”

Expectation that you’re either mentally fit or not. Perception that physical health is on a continuum but mental health is binary. “When we start to take away this barrier between physical and mental health and just call it health.”

- View of mental health as an issue for “them” not “us.” Historically, the only education around mental health offered by agencies has focused on the extremes of mental illness and crisis, thus deepening the stigma. “We’re either ‘us’ or ‘them’… and I don’t want to be them.”
BARRIER: FINANCIAL STRESS

- Out of pocket cost of care/prescription
- Under financial stress, worry about losing income, fitness for duty
BARRIER; FEAR AND STIGMA

Fear of personnel records/ medications becoming public knowledge.

Variation in departmental policies across cities. While some departments require certain medications be reported to the department, others do not require this reporting. There is a lack of clarity about policies.

Fear of loss of benefits tied to mental health diagnosis

Fear of legal action/lawsuits

Change diagnostic criteria

Fear of becoming impaired on the job by taking medication.
BARRIER; ACCESS TO TREATMENT

Lack of psychiatric providers.

Lack of therapists/providers who understands the life of a responder.

Stigma of walking into clinic for care. Responders often feel shame entering the same facilities that they transport people in crisis to...they feel they are letting down their peers and are weak.

Lack of pre-retirement preparation for stress impact
INNOVATION;
CHANGE LANGUAGE, ADDRESS STIGMA

Break the stigma of responders asking for help

Change the departmental language used around mental health. Can we call it an “injury type” or “routine welfare check,” rather than an emotional disturbance (ED) or “1096”?

Normalize a mental health issue as a stress injury. Departmental wellness checks and trainings.

Required training on what the brain goes through under trauma (stress injury formation). Wellness checks. E.g. Mandated yearly requirement to see clinician to reduce stigma of talking to someone- “check up from the neck up”.

Embed wellness check up in primary or occupational care clinics

INNOVATION;

INTERVENE EARLY, FOCUS ON PREVENTION

Need to recognize and mitigate mental health issues before responders need medication.

“Target sleep.” Routine doctor visit includes mental health with specialist in house.

Scheduled Check in’s – specifically after critical incidents (TSQ)

Proactive Retirement Planning If responders wait until they retire to seek support, it’s too late, as many of the benefits/resources are only for current responders.
Trauma Screening Questionnaire (TSQ)

If you have recently been exposed to a potentially traumatic event (PTES), here is a tool that may help you to identify whether or not you should seek additional help in recovering from its effects. Have you recently experienced any of the following:

<table>

INNOVATION;

INTERVENE EARLY, FOCUS ON PREVENTION

Build the pool of culturally competent clinicians. Don’t need prescribers to work full time.

- Train psychiatric providers in first response. “Find a prescriber and teach them.”
- Embed providers in departments:
  - Telemedicine
- Seek reimbursement for psychiatric care

Offer consultation to existing PCP’s and work comp programs
INNOVATION;
TRAIN LEADERSHIP

Put people with behavioral health understanding in leadership positions.

Need departmental personnel responders can go to confidentially. [Peers]

INNOVATION; EDUCATION

- Train peer supporters and others who triage emergency responders about medications.

  Clarify departmental policies with responders. Uncertainty around departmental policies breeds fear of losing job and benefits, as well as legal action.

  Educate peers on what policy allows and what doctors are prescribing.

  Module for peer supporters, EAP providers.

  Online module, e.g. medications and side effects.

- National Fire Service Behavioral Health Symposium

- The objective of this meeting is to review the current state of research as it relates to behavioral health in the fire service, and to support knowledge transfer of best practices related to behavioral health programs in the fire service.

- GOALS:
  - To provide researchers with an opportunity to deliver the latest information
  - To disseminate best practices that will enable fire service attendees to transition the known scientific evidence about behavioral health into actionable activity
  - To provide attendees with an opportunity for open dialogue with researchers and clinicians to discuss pertinent issues and receive first-hand recommendations and best practices related to behavioral health awareness and treatment programs at the local level
  - To enable researchers to gather feedback from primary stakeholders and solicit information regarding needs for future fire service behavioral health research
